SYBIL RICHARDS: MY SPIRITUAL JOURNEY TO JUDAISM

Sybil Richards recently relocated from Knoxville Tennessee to practice law in New Haven. A native of New York, Ms Richards longed to be closer to her family and to try her hand at law on her own.

Sybil has been practicing Judaism since childhood and has been praying in Hebrew for most of her life. She grew up attending a synagogue in Harlem. Some years ago, Sybil decided to convert to Judaism. As an African-American Jew, her story is fascinating and inspiring. Come hear her story.

Late Friday Evening Services are at 8:00 PM on June 10th.

The Chicken That Had No Heart

In 1709 there was a great sensation when a young girl who was preparing a chicken for dinner was unable to find its heart. Perhaps the cat ate it. But if not—if it were possible that the chicken never had a heart—then the chicken could not be kosher, for an animal missing an organ cannot be kosher.

The Hakham Tsvi ruled, based on Rashi, statements of the sages in the Talmud, and other sources, that no chicken could live without a heart, and so this chicken must have had a heart when shekhted (slaughtered) and therefore was kosher.

Another sage, Rabbi Yohanan Eybeschutz, took issue with the process followed by the Hakham Tsvi in rendering his decision. Rabbi Eybeschutz believed that the question should be solved not by referring to the opinions of Rashi, the Amoraim, or the Greek physicians, but rather by consulting with the medical faculty at the local university.

The decision reached by both sages was the same—the chicken must have had a heart, and so it was kosher. But the process was different, and it is in that difference that the distinct method of the Conservative rabbis in reaching halakhic decisions can be seen.

Conservative/Masorti Judaism shares with movements of the past and Orthodoxy today a fundamental commitment to Jewish law (halakha), and all who are so committed recognize that the issue of whether a chicken is kosher is indeed a question of halakha. But questions of fact—whether medical, sociological, or otherwise—are often essential components of halakhic decisions. In this case the medical question of whether a chicken could live without a heart was a question of fact on which the halakhic decision turned. The approach followed by the Conservative rabbinate is to recognize when such questions of fact are by necessity part of a halakhic decision and to act accordingly. We might say, then, that Rabbi Eybeschutz was acting as a Conservative rabbi in his deliberations whereas the Hakham Tsvi would have better fit another mold. This Conservative methodology is a mainstream and traditional approach, but it is not and never was universally accepted. It is part of an age-old controversy.

This same essential distinction in approach has implications for issues of broader impact than the girl’s chicken. For example, the Shulhan Arukh, the definitive law code from the 16th century, states, “All may count as one of the seven olim to the Torah [on shabbat], including a women, including a child old enough to know to whom he is praying, but our sages said a woman does not read in public because of the honor of the congregation” (O.H. 282:3). Many Conservative rabbis ruled that in our day a woman may be called to the Torah because the only reason they had been prohibited from doing so was the concern of ‘honor of the congregation,’ and today women being called to the Torah would not diminish the honor of the congregation—to the contrary! In other words, a change in sociological conditions brought about a change in the outcome of halakha. The essence and process of halakha remained the same; only the outcome changed. The permission to call women to the Torah was fully within rabbinic judicial discretion, fully in keeping with the process of halakha, and fully supported by the sociological facts of the case and precedent; therefore it was a legitimate development.

I believe that this understanding is important to us in defining ourselves as Conservative Jews. We are committed to living according to Jewish law and custom, and we are committed to the traditional process by which Jewish law develops. That rules out intransigence on the one hand and a free-for-all on the other. When Jewish law developed in such a way as to affirm the practice of women being called to the Torah, some mistakenly concluded that Conservative Jews abandoned the law, or that Conservative Rabbis can change the law willy-nilly to suit passing fashions. By understanding the traditional process of the development of the law, we see that exactly the opposite is true. Judaism without a living, changing, growing halakha would be a chicken without a heart.
Dear Rabbi,

Where do you get those sermons and articles of yours? Do you copy them from the Illustrated Rabbis' News or do you just make them up?

Signed,
Wondering in Westville

Dear Wondering,

A Rabbi told how one week he was so busy he could not prepare a dvar torah for shabbat, so he read a sermon verbatim out of the Rabbinical Assembly's Sermon Service booklet. "Rabbi," his congregants told him after the service, "that was the best sermon you've ever given!" He vowed to never again use someone else's sermon.

I do not use divrei torah written by others, but, on the other hand, nothing I say is intentionally original. I strive simply to convey Torah as I have learned it. Divrei Torah are meant to be either instructive in Torah or inspiring in faith, not merely informative or entertaining. If I have conveyed the words and wisdom of our sages clearly and completely, then I have done my job.

All letters to Dear Rabbi should be addressed to Rabbi J-J van Tilsen, care of this newsletter. Due to the volume of mail received, Dear Rabbi cannot answer all inquiries.

What helped you when you were mourning? What do you do during a shiva call? What are the requirements for Jewish burial? Why do people cover mirrors during shiva? Why do we say Mourner's Qaddish?

The answers to these and other questions on dying, death and mourning will be examined in an evening workshop lead by Rabbi Tilsen and Marsha Beller on Thursday evening 23 June at 7:30 in the BEKI Library. All are invited to participate. Mark your calendar right now.

MEN’S CLUB NEWS

Men’s Club activities in April were somewhat limited because so much else was going on in the synagogue that kept us busy. For our May breakfast on the fifteenth we invited Rabbi Carla Theodore of Woodville, Virginia to be our guest speaker. We will report on her visit in our next news column.

We extend a very special thank you to all club members who have contributed in the past year to the Camp Ramah Scholarship Fund with their dues and to the many others of the congregation who acknowledged our Yom HaShoah Memorial Candle Program with their donations. Honorariums from the Fund are now going out to our young people who are going to Camp Ramah this summer.

At our June breakfast on the fifth, which will precede the much awaited drawing for the Vacation Raffle, we are planning a special program. Support the Raffle, come to breakfast and be a winner!

We are organizing a Blood Drive to take place at the synagogue on Monday, June 27th, between 1:30 and 6:00 pm. Volunteers are needed to help with recruitment and scheduling of donors. We will be calling on you!

Our deepest condolences go out to the Tyson family on the loss of David, their beloved husband, father, and grandfather. A long-time member of the Men’s Club, he will be sorely missed. May his memory be for a blessing.

תודה רבה

To Sisterhood member Sylvia Zeid for setting up our ongei shabbat week after week, thereby enhancing our shabbat experience

A significant gift has been made to BEKI by Stanley Rosenbaum & Paula Hyman in memory of Belle Rosenbaum

To Kadima members and George Posener for planting the bulbs that flowered this spring and brightened our surroundings

IT'S SPRING CLEANING TIME

Go through your closets, check out the attic, attack your basement and garage. Get rid of all your unnecessary collectibles at Sisterhood's Spring Rummage and Tag Sale to be held Sunday, June 12th from 9:00 am. to 3:00 pm. and on Monday, June 13th from 9:00 am. to 1:00 pm.

We need your spring clothing now, remember only clean and wearable clothing, small appliances in working condition, lamps, costume jewelry, glassware, pictures, linens, dishes, toys, small furniture, etc.

On Thursday night, June 9th at 7:30 pm. we will set up. Since these sales are Sisterhood's big fund raisers we need lots of help. Please call Mimi Kahn at 387-8105 and say you'll volunteer to help.
